Going into business can be a big risk.

It's no surprise that you may have looked at ways to cut corners and save costs. The lure of cheap branding options and do-it-yourself marketing solutions "in the meantime" can be tempting. In reality, they're shortcuts to failure.

Does any of this DIY pain sound familiar?

"A free program isn't really "free" when it's sucking all my time and patience to produce only mediocre results - not to mention the learning curve..."

"I don't know why my $5 logo looks fuzzy/discolored/distorted. Do I even have the programs to fix it?"

"This design doesn't really feel like my style. I'm embarrassed to hand out my business card. Gosh, I hope nobody looks at my website!"

"I can't even focus on doing what I do best to make money because this logo/design/website/video project is taking sooo long to figure out!"

"I'll make a proper website once the big ticket sales roll in. Right now, nobody seems to know I exist. I should probably start offering huge discounts to get attention."
